

The 50th Anniversary of the March on Washington Lesson Plan: Racial Equality-

How far have we come and how far do we still need to go?

Think about the courage of the hundreds of thousands of individuals who participated in the civil rights movement. So many fought the injustice in so many ways- from working on the Underground Railroad, keeping their culture alive, signing up to play baseball, sitting-in, boycotting buses, riding buses, voting and participating in the March on Washington. Is there something that means enough to you that you would march for it? Would you be brave enough to march? Answer the following questions below:

What would you march for? Defend and explain why this cause or belief is important enough to march for.

What would you want to accomplish and how would you know if it had been accomplished?
